The School Choice International Announces first of its kind bench marking survey entitled "Mobility & Education: Corporate Policies and Practices"

New detailed survey to explore the practices of global employers regarding education-related assistance for assignees with school-age children

(White Plains, NY-January 27th) School Choice International, the premiere global education consultancy headquartered in White Plains, New York, recently launched the first of its kind bench marking survey to quantify the education related mobility practices of the world's leading global corporations. Mobility & Education: Corporate Policies and Practices surveyed many of the most influential global mobility professionals to capture the policy and practices of their respective corporations by geography and employee level. The initial results have become available and will be shared by those that participate in the survey.

"This type of information has never before been available at the level of detail this survey offers" commented School Choice International's CEO Timothy Dwyer. "It is an essential tool for any organization that wants to make sure its policies are competitive in the mobility marketplace"

School Choice International will now expand its survey invitation to program managers or administrators with knowledge of their organization's international mobility policies to participate in the survey. It should take an estimated 20 minutes to complete the survey. All participants will receive a report of these results, and no individual organization's data will be disclosed to any other participants. See <https://www.surveymonkey.com/s/FJXHWCX> to participate.
